Daily Business Notes — July 1 to August 15, 2026

These are my personal business notes for the period July to mid-August 2026. I keep track of what sold well, what I bought, what expenses I had, and any observations from customers or day-to-day operations. Not everything is exact but I try to write down important things every day or two.

July 1, 2026 — Wednesday

Good start to July. Sold about 12 Dettol soaps to a regular customer who runs a small hostel nearby — he always buys in bulk at the start of the month. Also moved around 20 strips of Paracetamol 500mg, the usual demand from nearby residents. Had to restock Dettol today — bought 50 pieces from the distributor at Rs 22 each, total came to Rs 1,100. Paid the shop rent of Rs 8,000 today, first of the month as always. July is starting well.

July 2–3, 2026

These two days were average. Sold some Disprin strips and Hand Sanitizer. The sanitizer demand has dropped compared to last year but still sells steadily — maybe 4-5 bottles a day. On July 3rd I also paid the June electricity bill which came to Rs 1,200. Higher than usual because of the fans running all day in this heat. One customer complained that the small Dettol handwash bottle finishes too quickly — maybe I should stock the 500ml version more. Crocin 650mg selling well, fever season starting early this year.

July 4–7, 2026 — End of First Week

School reopened on July 5th and immediately saw a jump in Paracetamol sales — parents buying for kids. Sold around 25 strips in one day which is unusual. ORS sachets also moving fast, summer heat still on. Did a weekly medicine restock on July 6th — spent Rs 5,500 on various medicines including Crocin, ORS, Disprin, Vicks and some bandages. Sold 30 ORS sachets over the weekend — dehydration cases in the area. Overall first week decent, total sales around Rs 3,000.

July 8–10, 2026

Throat infection cases increasing — sold 8 packs of Strepsils in two days. Also noticed more people buying B-Complex vitamin tablets, seems like there is some awareness drive happening in the area, maybe from the local doctor. Sold 5 bottles of B-Complex at Rs 120 each — good margin on this product. Bought general items worth Rs 3,200 from supplier on July 10th. Burnol cream sold 3 pieces — some kitchen burn cases from nearby households. Typical rainy season beginning to show.

July 11–14, 2026

ORS demand hit a peak this week — sold 40 sachets in just 4 days. The heat combined with early monsoon humidity is causing lots of dehydration cases. Paid Internet bill of Rs 699 on July 12th. Restocked medicines again on July 13th — Rs 4,800 worth. Dettol Handwash selling steadily, 6 pieces this week. Vicks Inhaler also picked up — 4 pieces. Week 2 total sales around Rs 3,700 which is better than last week.

July 15–18, 2026 — Monsoon Hits Properly

Monsoon arrived properly this week and immediately the fever medicine sales went up dramatically. Paracetamol 500mg — sold 30 strips in three days. Crocin also went up. Betadine solution selling more than usual — monsoon means more cuts and wounds from slippery roads. Did a major restock on July 17th — Rs 6,200 for medicines — biggest single purchase this month because I could see demand was going to be high. July 18th was salary day — paid Rs 12,000 total for my two staff members. This is my biggest fixed expense every month after rent. Amoxicillin 500mg selling more — doctor prescriptions increasing for infections.

July 19–21, 2026

B-Complex sales continued strong — 8 bottles sold this week. One customer specifically mentioned their doctor recommended it. Hand Sanitizer 500ml — introduced larger size this week at Rs 150, sold 6 pieces on first day which is encouraging. ORS sachets still flying off shelves — 35 sachets in 3 days. The week ended well, total around Rs 5,800 in sales. Note to self: need to urgently reorder ORS and Paracetamol — stock getting critically low.

July 22–25, 2026

Got a nice bulk order from a corporate office nearby — they bought 20 Dettol soaps at Rs 30 each, total Rs 600 in one transaction. These bulk B2B orders are good for business. Paid quarterly GST of Rs 2,800 on July 24th — always a painful expense but necessary. Vicks VapoRub picked up — 8 pieces. ORS still selling fast, 45 sachets this week. Restocked on July 23rd — Rs 4,500. Amoxicillin demand continuing strong.

July 26–31, 2026 — End of Month

Last week of July was solid. Hand sanitizer, Strepsils, Disprin all selling well. Crocin had its best week — 25 strips sold in one week. Dettol Handwash also good — 8 pieces. Did another restock on July 28th — Rs 3,800. Bought packaging material supplies worth Rs 450. July overall was a very good month — monsoon season really helped medicine sales. Total July sales estimated around Rs 18,350. Main concerns: high purchase costs eating into margins, staff salary and rent are fixed big expenses. Customer feedback this month: 2 customers asked if we stock homeopathy medicines — something to think about for future. One regular customer complimented the shop cleanliness.

August 1, 2026 — New Month Start

August started with the usual first-of-month expenses — paid Rs 8,000 shop rent. Paracetamol and Crocin still selling strong from monsoon demand. Did opening stock purchase of Rs 5,500 to start the month well. B-Complex tablets continuing to sell — 10 bottles today. Amoxicillin demand increasing — infection season seems to be at peak. Good start to August.

August 2–5, 2026

Paid July electricity bill on August 4th — Rs 1,350, slightly higher than June because monsoon season means more humid days requiring fans and dehumidifier. Amoxicillin sales hitting 12 pieces in a week — good product, good margin. Strepsils and B-Complex both selling well. Did another smaller restock on August 6th — Rs 3,200. Vicks VapoRub — 10 pieces this week, best week ever for this product. Week 1 August looking better than July week 1.

August 8–10, 2026 — Peak Sales Days

August 8th was exceptional — highest single day Paracetamol sales ever — 35 strips in one day. Some viral fever outbreak in the nearby colony. ORS also sold 50 sachets on August 8th alone. Had to rush a small emergency purchase from a nearby wholesale shop. August 10th was salary day — Rs 12,000 for both staff. Also paid internet bill of Rs 699. B-Complex really picking up — 12 bottles in 3 days. One customer who has been buying regularly said she recommended our shop to her entire apartment society — good word of mouth.

August 11–13, 2026

Sales remained strong. Strepsils — 10 pieces. Vicks — 6 pieces. Dettol Handwash demand spiked — 10 pieces in 2 days. Seems school season is driving hygiene product demand as parents stock up for kids going to school. Restocked on August 14th — Rs 3,500. Crocin and Betadine both selling well. Getting a lot of prescription customers for Amoxicillin — building good relationship with local doctors who trust us to always have stock.

August 14–15, 2026 — Independence Day Weekend

Ran a small Independence Day discount sale on August 15th — 10% off on selected items. This brought in a nice bulk purchase of Rs 2,500 from a customer who stocked up on medicines for his family. Good decision to do the promotion. ORS sachets — 40 more sold. Paracetamol 500mg — 20 strips. August is looking like it will beat July total sales. Mid-month August sales already at Rs 9,840 for week 2 alone. Overall business sentiment positive. Need to think about expanding the vitamin and supplement section — B-Complex success shows there is demand. Also getting requests for protein supplements from gym-goers in the area.

Summary Observations — July to Mid August 2026

Looking back at the last 6-7 weeks, a few clear patterns have emerged. Monsoon season was the biggest driver of sales — fever medicines, ORS, and antiseptics all saw significant volume increases. The decision to do a large restock in mid-July paid off well as demand peaked exactly when stock was ready. B-Complex tablets are a new rising star — doctor recommendations are driving consistent sales. Bulk/corporate orders are worth pursuing more aggressively — the office order in July was easy money with no effort. Main cost concern remains the fixed expenses — Rs 20,000 per month in rent and salaries means I need to maintain at least Rs 30,000 in monthly sales just to break even. The expired ORS complaint from two customers in July is something I must take seriously — need a better system to check expiry dates regularly. Overall I am cautiously optimistic about August ending strong.
