

My Personal Diary — Summer 2026

June 15, 2026

Dear Diary, Today was a beautiful day. I woke up early in the morning and went for a walk in the park near my house. The birds were singing and the flowers were blooming. I felt very peaceful and happy. After my walk, I had breakfast with my family. Mom made delicious parathas with pickle and curd. My little sister Priya was being annoying as usual, complaining about everything. In the afternoon, I called my best friend Rohit. We talked for hours about our school days and how much we miss those times. We planned to meet next week at our favourite chai shop near college. I also read a novel today — "The Alchemist" by Paulo Coelho. It was inspiring. The story is about a shepherd boy who travels from Spain to Egypt to find his treasure. The message is that when you really want something, the universe conspires to help you achieve it. At night, I watched a movie with family — a romantic comedy. We laughed a lot. These small moments of happiness are what life is all about. Goodnight, Diary. Tomorrow is a new day.

June 16, 2026

Today I went shopping with Priya. We bought new clothes for the upcoming festival season. I got a beautiful blue kurta and Priya got a pink dress. We also had ice cream at the mall. In the evening, I tried cooking pasta for the first time. It turned out okay — a little too salty but edible. I will try again next time with less salt. Feeling grateful today for all the small joys in life. Family, friends, food, and good books. What more does one need?